CALL FOR PARTICIPANTS IN RESEARCH

Blurred Lines: Labour Exploitation, Modern Slavery, and the Law

If you have experience in working in warehousing, hospitality, or social care sectors in the UK, we would like to invite you to participate in an interview for a research project at the University of Oxford. The aim of this research is to identify the best ways to prevent and remedy exploitation at work, including severe exploitation such as modern slavery. Our goal is to inform the policies and practices to prevent exploitation and support individuals working in these sectors in the UK. Your voice and insights can help with those efforts.

We would like to learn about your experiences at work, including any problems you have had at work and your access to justice and support. The interview will last for one hour. The interview can be in-person or online. We will compensate you for your time and effort and cover expenses such as travel and childcare.

If you would like to participate, please contact us via email provided below and we will arrange an interview. We can also provide more details about this research and answer any questions you may have before deciding whether to take part in it.
